	Mexico: New Attorney General Cleaning House Mexico's new Attorney General, Jorge Carpizo, is making significant personnel changes within the Attorney General's office (PGR)—Mexico's lead counternarco-
v.	tics agency—During an early March news conference, Carpizo complained of numerous irregularities ranging from missing files and property to police collusion with drug traffickers. Carpizo said a backing of more than 86,000 cases needed to be resolved, and he also criticized the use of madrinas—unpaid police officers who are often used to perform illegal acts such as torture and extortion, usually with the tacit approval of their superiors.
